Mr. Keezell Makes a Strong Effort to Defeat It-Game Law Passed by the House-Other Legislative Matters.

The Jamestown Exposition bill yester day passed the Senate of Virginia by a vote of 22 to 11, and, having already passed the House of Delegates, it nov requires only the approval of the Governor to make the bill law. As is very generally known, the measure carrie conditional appropriation of $200,000 payable in 1904 and 1905, after satisfactory evidence that the company has $250,000 before the first quarter of the appropriation is available, and an

The passage of the bill was accom-plished after a debate of nearly an hour and a half. Twenty-one votes were re-'quired, so that the vote actually cast left quired, so that the vote actually cast letter a margin of one more than actually necessary. Senators Cogbill and Watkins, of whose attitude there was some doubt, both lined up for the bill. Senator George Wayne Anderson, who was favorable to the bill, was detained by illness and was not paired. Those Senators voting for the bill were Messrs. Barksdale, Bryant, Claytor, Cogbill. Then Sentor Watkins voted aye, and this made the assurance doubly sure. The long fight was ended, and only the stern admonition of Lieutenant-Governor Willard before the vote was announced restrained the outburst of joy, which nevertheless found eloquent, though silent, expression in the faces of the friends of the exposition project. As soon as the vote the debate and followed closely the roll call, made a rush for the door, and in the rotunda outside the satisfaction of the lamestown advocates found its unretrained expression.

A large delegation of prominent Nor-lock citizens was present, including the president of the exposition company, Gentral Fitzburch Lee, who occupied a section of the company.

At 12:20 the bill appropriating 1300,000 to the Jamestown Exposition Company was laid before the Senate, the question being on its passage.

Mr. Keezell Opposes.

In the outset Mr. Keezell, of Roakingham, a member of the Finance Committee, delivered an impressive protest against the passage of the bill. Mr. Shands' Argument.

Mr. Shands' Argument.

Mr. Shands, of Southampton, closed the debate in a five-minute appeal for the passage of the bill. He referred to the presence in the city of the many distinguished northern visitors, and urged the Senate not to let these visitors carry back with them the knowledge that Virginia had failed to seize this great opportunity for its own advancement. In a reference to the chairman of the Finance Committee. Mr. Wickham, Mr. Shands called forth a profound bow and an unpremeditated blush from the Hanover Senator by declaring that he was worthy to grace the embassy of the United States at the court of St. James. Mr. St. Clair called the pending question, which was on the passage of the bill, and it was ordered. The roll-call was followed with great interest, but the chair having warned against any demonstration the result was received without any open manifestation of pleasure by the large number of advocates of the bill who were present. Thirty-three of the thirty-nine Senators were required. Senator Tyler's vone was the twenty-first in favor of the bill, and assured its passage, but Mr. Watkina of Prince Edward, fell in line and swelled the majority for the bill by his vote, giving a total of twenty-two affirmative votes to eleven for the opposition. This was just an even two-thirds of the vote. giving a total of twenty-two affirmative votes to eleven for the opposition. This was just an even two-thirds of the vote cast, and one more than the requisite number to secure the passage of the bill. Mr. Cogbill, whose attitude toward the measure was not generally known, also voted for the measure. Senator Anderson, who favored the bill, was absent, but his vote was not needed. Senators Harman, Hutcheson, Revercomb, Walker and Whitehead were absent. Here is the full recorded vote:

The first proposition was that of increasing the license from $30 to $125, as coming from the Finance Committee.
Upon this proposition Mr. E. H. Wells,

To the surprise of all, and to the delight of the liquor men and the opponents of high license, Mr. Bradley, who had stuck to the high license proposition, introduced a resolution tabling the whole matter. Myers, Boyd and Leake to New York, was with a wiew to making one more effort to hasten the movement looking to a reorganization of the company. These gentlemen returned to the city yesterday, but stated that they had nothing for publication at this time.

A special to The Times-Dispatch from New York, however, conveys the information that the United States Ship-building Company officials are considering tentatively a proposition to reorganize the plant. This statement is regarded as disclosing the purpose of the visit of the receiver, attorney and one of the second mortgage bondholders to New York. Here is the telegram referred to:

"Interests prominent in the United States Ship-building Company are said to have under tentative consideration a proposition to reorganize the Trigg Ship-building Company of Richmond, Va.

"Local officers of the United States Ship-building Company state that if the matter of reorganization is being considered, it has not reached a stage where they have knowledge of it."

The following telegram from The Times-Dispatch's Washington correspondent sets at rest the rumor as to the claim of the creditors to the unfinished boats as assets of the company:

The Navy Department will give the Trigg Company until the first of May to decide what will be done with the cruiser Galveston and other government work under construction at the yards when the company ceased operations. It is the wish of the department to give the company all the time possible in which to effect a reorganization and get to work again, but it will not wait indefinitely and should there be no indication of an early resumption of work, the department will advertise for bids for completion of the vessels and charge the amount of the successful bid to the primary contractors.

It was stated at the department today that work on the Galveston was fifteen-twentieths completed. This portion by the subcommittees of the Senate and House as a substitute for the Barksdale primary elections bill, was yesterday favorably reported by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections. The bill, as reported, is essentially and almost in every detail the same measure of fered by the Halifax Senator. It is supplementary to the pure elections bill, but provides also, for a general primary plan, the feature of which is that all the expenses of such primary are to be borne by the State, district or county, and the returns are to be conventions. The judges are to be selected by the Electoral Boards from lists furnished them by the several members of the committees of the parties or factions. This solution of the matter is regarded as the best that could be devised, and comes nearest to satisfying all parties. Under the plan the judges are to be chosen by the boards from these lists furnished them.

The plan, if adopted, will restore the old State district and county conventions for the nomination of candidates. Delegates to such conventions are to be chosen by primary, however. herever more than one county is interested in a nomination, a convention is required by the plan.
